THE RUNDOWN

Texas hold'em poker is everywhere these days — on TV, in clubs, casinos and now on the all new Crypto Poker App, powered by Boorio.

During the game, you need to understand basic odds and playable hands, as well as how to bluff successfully and follow proper poker etiquette. Texas hold 'em also has its own abbreviations for online play.

The Basics

In hold'em, players receive two down cards as their personal hand (holecards), after which there is a round of betting. Three board cards are turned simultaneously (called the flop) and another round of betting occurs. The next two board cards are turned one at a time, with a round of betting after each card. The board cards are community cards, and a player can use any five-card combination from among the board and personal cards. A player can even use all of the board cards and no personal cards to form a hand ("play the board"). A dealer button is used. The usual structure is to use two blinds, but it is possible to play the game with one blind, multiple blinds, an ante, or combination of blinds plus an ante.

Rounds of Betting

Opening deal

Each player is dealt two cards face down, which are known as hole cards or pocket cards.

First round of betting

Starting with the player to the left of the big blind, each player can call the big blind, raise, or fold. The big blind has the option to raise an otherwise unraised pot.

The flop

The dealer burns a card, and then deals three community cards face up. The first three cards are referred to as the flop, while all of the community cards are collectively called the board.

Second round of betting

Starting with the player to the left of the dealer button, each player can check or bet. Once a bet has been made, each player can raise, call, or fold.

The turn

The dealer burns another card, and then adds a fourth card face-up to the community cards. This fourth card is known as the turn card, or fourth street.

Third round of betting

It follows the same format as the second round, but the size of the bets have usually doubled in limit games.

The river

The dealer burns another card, and then adds a fifth and final card to the community cards. This fifth card is known as the river card, or fifth street.

Final round of betting

It follows the same format as the second and third rounds.

The showdown

Using the best five-card combination of their hole cards and the community cards, the remaining players show their hands, with the bettor or last raiser showing first. The highest five-card hand wins the pot. (In case of a tie, the pot is evenly split among the winning hands.)

Important tips and tricks

Rough odds for Texas Hold'em

Playing poker is about playing the odds. The following list gives the odds for outcomes in Texas hold'em hands. When you realize how heavily the odds are stacked against you, you may want to rethink going all-in before the flop with two suited cards. Use the odds to your advantage:

1 percent (1-in-100):

Percentage of time that no player holds an Ace or a King at a table in a 10-handed game

Percentage of time that if you hold two suited cards, you'll flop a flush

6 percent (about 1-in-20):

Percentage of time that five community cards will give pocket suited cards a flush

Percentage of time that you'll be dealt a pocket pair

8 percent (about 1-in-12):

Percentage of time that you'll hit at least trips after having a pair on the flop

12 percent (about 1-in-8):

Percentage of time that you'll flop trips if holding a pocket pair

Percentage of time that two more cards will flop in the same suit as a suited pocket pair

19 percent (about 1-in-5):

Percentage of time that the five community cards will at least trip your pocket pair

32 percent (about 1-in-3):

Percentage of time that you'll pair one of your cards on the flop (with no pocket pair)

33 percent (about 1-in-3):

Percentage of time that you'll make a full house or better after having trips on the flop

35 percent (about 1-in-3):

Percentage of time that you'll make a flush on the turn or river if you have four cards to a flush after the flop

Texas hold'em bluffing tips

What makes any poker game exciting, and Texas hold'em is certainly no exception, is that players can bluff at any point. Sometimes half the fun of a game is seeing whether you can successfully bluff an opponent out of some money. But, even as you're misleading your opponents, make sure you bluff in the right circumstances. Heed these bluffing tips:

Only bluff where it makes a difference to your standing — either in a tournament or to your stack of chips.

Be careful bluffing someone considerably worse than you are. He may call just to see what you have, or on some probabilistically low draw when he already has you beaten anyway.

Bluff in situations where the board hints at the great hand you do not have: straights and flushes being hinted at by the board, the turn of an Ace, and so on. Don't try to bluff players who only play the most solid of hands if they're still in the pot.

Don't bluff people who are extremely likely to call.

Do bluff the timid or people who are likely to fold.

Remember that it's easier to bluff in No-Limit than Limit because the bets (both implied and real) are bigger.
